Still doesn't address the reason why we may sit this one out.If Biden wants progressives(& young voters) to go out & vote for him, he would need to give us a reason to do it,"Orange Man Bad" is not enough. Taking our votes for granted & dismissing our needs would be a big mistake

Biden made a tightly-produced video mocking Buttigieg's entire time as mayor, Kamala Harris basically said Biden was soft on segregationists and would've ruined her childhood. I mean that's politics. People fight one second make up the next.

Elizabeth Warren is a politician thinking about her future career and probably didn't want to risk an extremely uphill fight against Joe Biden. It's not like rocket science. I doubt she even reads Twitter (or hope not, anyway).

Getting rid of all payroll taxes through the end of the year is about $1 trillion. Plus [redacted] the other stuff Trump is talking about.

Democrats don't like this idea, top Rs are noncommittal, many other Rs want to know a LOT more before talking about any payroll tax cut.

18 [redacted] [redacted]

I read an estimate somewhere that every 1% cut would = like 50-75 Billion in lost revenue. If he takes it from ~6% to 0% like he is proposing, that's approaching a half TRILLION dollars.

Steven Dennis @StevenTDennis · 8h

It's close to double that because he's also talking about eliminating the 6.4% employers pay.

Instead of listening to public health experts, Trump is spreading disinformation about a global pandemic that threatens American families.

With 1,000+ U.S. coronavirus cases and climbing, it's critical that Trump's address tonight lay out plans to mitigate this deadly threat.

A distinct possibility: Trump had one of his regular reading issues. He said the "prohibitions will not only apply" to cargo. Very possible the text said the prohibitions "will not apply" to cargo, he accidentally added the "only," and then, as usual, tried to roll with it.

There's a broad Coalition that recognizes politics is about addition, not subtraction. That is growing the party. Those voices matter too. And yet many are told to take a back seat. That's not helpful or accurate.

Actually not completely. We need treatment covered for everyone and this bill does not do that. 78 million people are uninsured or underinsured and if they can't afford treatment that seems like a problem.

Not true. She has a plan for this. And Biden will lay one out today. It's not the "political system"... it is the GOP and Trump who treats the govt as an abstraction and are unable to competently govern.

WORTH REPEATING: In 2018, Trump fired the entire US pandemic response team.

These were the experts with decades of experience dealing with precisely the kind of situation we are in today.

Trump did not replace them.

We are rushing headlong toward a point where the only choice to stave off a recession is to pour federal stimulus directly into the pockets of the least economically advantaged Americans.

Republicans hate nothing more.

Italy just suspended mortgage payments for six months.

We will need that level of drastic, systemic stimulus to both save the vulnerable from financial pain and maintain the economy through what will be a long slow pandemic and recovery.

Biden has argued he can unite the party. It has been a strength of his with Dem voters. Uniting the party for the general will mean uniting the center and left of the party. I hope Bernie will help him do that, but he has to try as well. And he started Tuesday night.

If you're wondering whether it's an overreaction to cancel large gatherings and public events (and I love basketball), here's a useful primer as to why these measures can slow the spread of the virus and save lives. We have to look out for each other.

They're trying to change history—don't let them. In the chaotic atmosphere of 2020, the Wayback Machine is a crucial resource in the fight against disinformation, and now more than ever we need your help. Right now we're preserving history as it unfolds, keeping track of who's saying what and when—all without charging for access, selling user data, or running ads. Instead, we rely on the generosity of individuals to help us keep the record straight.

All of this could have ramped up and solved in January ▮ February and right now we would be talking about containment. We could have also allowed labs to produce tests earlier or gotten WHO tests.

We did not. Why? In part Federal workers could not be seen contradicting Trump. 4/

Still today, people in the CDC are well aware of the fatality estimates at the top of this thread. Yet they are muzzled. They are aware of the shortages. Yet they are muzzled.

Worse, they are being asked to call the press and tell them they are not being muzzles. 6/

Andy Slavitt @ @ASlavitt · Mar 12

That story will get told. But I'd like to shift who's responsible to what we do about it. I've offered help to this Administration, Congress, governor, mayor, health official, lab or hospital. I'm nothing special but it is time to pull together & put aside differences. 7/

When the story of this is written, the NBA postponement and Tom Hanks diagnosis could very well be the moment the average American began taking coronavirus seriously. The question, of course, is how much worse this will end up being because that took so long

Currently experts expect over 1 million deaths in the U.S. since the virus was not contained & we cannot even test for it.

This will be recorded as a major preventable public health disaster. I will try to relate what I learned from a long day of calls about what is happening.

The original sin is Trump's months long denial and his dismantling of public health and response infrastructure.

That wasn't all, but it led to other fatal mistakes. 2/

Andy Slavitt @ASlavitt · 1h

The public health infrastructure could have been prepared. What does that mean: nasal swabs, respirators, ventilators, RNA kits to read tests, machines, gloves.

We can at best do 10,000 tests/day. We should be able to do millions. 3/

Andy Slavitt @ASlavitt · 1h

All of this could have ramped up and solved in January & February and right

First all of this is a lie.
Second, you've been president for 3 years - why didn't you fix this if it's true? Oh it's because it's a lie.
Third, under the Obama admin, there were a million tests available within weeks for H1N1.
You should have learned from him.

Agree. This is ■ sobering view of what may be ahead of us in #COVID19US Bearing in mind that our testing ■ behind schedule and that the US has ~5-fold more people than Italy, we may break their record of #COVID19 cases before we plateau

NEW: At 7 am Eastern Mnuchin, on behalf of Trump, pulled out of the agreement they had reached at 4 am to provide relief for Americans impacted by the Coronavirus. The package was the right thing.

He now wants more things Pelosi won't agree to. I don't know what they are.

As Trump tries blaming Obama for CDC problems, let's recall:

-Every Trump budget has proposed cutting CDC's budget. His OMB chief still backs cutting $1.2 billion this year

Wow — dean of University of Washington medical school is asking qualified graduate students to pause their research and instead help run COVID-19 lab tests.

Voluntary until compensation structure can be determined rapidly and immediately add staff for this work.

We are creating a pool of qualified people who can be called upon to help as needed to assist our clinical laboratories with COVID-19 sample processing and work-up. This work would be done as a voluntary reassignment from usual duties, with supervisory approval as we work on other compensation strategies. We will be communicating this need to federal officials and urging them to support such activity, but the critical need is now. Individuals who agree to assist will undergo training

The House could & should stick a provision to require states to adopt vote by mail systems into the relief bill, provide funding for equipment & waive postage on returned ballots. I wld be OK w delaying primaries by up to 60 days but requiring General to go ahead as scheduled.

Mike Guss @GussRuralWA · 14s
And they should make that provision non-negotiable. Elections have happened in pandemics before (Civil War, 1920; absentee voting was invented in the Civil War). We can & should have elections now.

Statement from Arizona, Florida, Illinois and Ohio Chief Elections Officials

PHOENIX – The following statement is attributable to Secretary of State Kathy Hobbs (AZ), Secretary of State Laurel Lee (FL), Elections Board Chairman Charles Scholz (IL) and Secretary of State Frank LaRose (OH):

As each of our four states prepare for voters to head to the polls on Tuesday, March 17, 2020, we are working closely with our state health officials to ensure that our poll workers and voters can be confident that voting is safe.

Unlike concerts, sporting events or other mass gatherings where large groups of people travel long distances to congregate in a confined space for an extended period of time, polling locations see people from a nearby community coming into and out of the building for a short duration. Further, guidance from voting machine manufacturers on how best to sanitize machines, guidance from CDC on best practices for hand washing, and guidance from our respective state health officials is being provided to every polling location.

Americans have participated in elections during challenging times in the past, and based on the best information we have from public health officials, we are confident that voters in our states can safely and securely cast their ballots in this election, and that otherwise healthy poll workers can and should carry out their patriotic duties on Tuesday.

Yes, expand voting hours. But DO NOT- I repeat DO NOT delay the elections. It would set a horrible precedence and embolden Trump to delay the general. The unthinkable would become thinkable.

Honesty here. A ban on domestic travel is significant and part of DoD pre positioning for a homeland mission. Again, may not need it, we want our military prepared and healthy. But there are signs we look for in terms of US modeling for [illegible]. And this is one of them. 1/

It's really not the end of the day, but with over 570 new cases already in the U.S. today, it's painfully clear that the curve is NOT being flattened so far. The U.S. continues to follow the path of Italy -- a path that leads to healthcare meltdown in a remarkably few days.

For the Senate to take a vote on the House sick leave bill this weekend (and we must), McConnell needs to call us back into session right now. Senators need to get on flights back to DC today.

The clock is ticking. Lives are at stake.

Love me some bernie bros pointing out that the difference between a handout of $1.5 trillion and a (collateralized!) loan (with interest!) of $1.5 trillion is a technicality.

If it was a $1.5 trillion hand out, the banks would have taken every penny they could get. If it was a hidden handout in the form of a below-market interest rate loan, ditto.

Repo is a short term loan, with interest, requiring collateral.

The Fed's repo facility is, admittedly, complicated, so lemme explain: The Fed is lending $1.5 trillion to banks. Those banks put up collateral, so even if they don't repay their loans, the govt won't lose ■ cent

While you are stocking up, don't forget flu remedies. Most people who contract coronavirus will have no choice but to ride it out at home. DayQuil, cough suppressants, fever reducers, and pain medicine will help. Once you have the virus, going out for meds will be a BAD idea.

How long does it take a manufacturer to make ventilators? The government should be buying ventilators en masse now.

One week after Pearl Harbor, FDR declared "we will not produce another car in this country until the war is won." And we didn't. Those factories began making armaments immediately. Why can't America-First Trump ask just a few factories to do the same for needed medical supplies?

The Times makes clear that the reversal is only very partial. There has been no repudiation on the underlying goal of achieving herd immunity (no school closures & large gatherings still allowed).

> But his government is not immune from public alarm, signaling late Friday night that it would reverse course on at least some aspects of its approach. It told British news outlets that it would ban some mass gatherings, like sporting matches and concerts, starting next weekend, and lay the groundwork for more widespread working at home.

I'm not a big fan of this

According to the UN, exit poll discrepancies exceeding 4% signify election fraud.

Here's what we've got so far:
CA: Bernie -11.1%, Biden +15.3%
TX: Bernie -11.8%, Biden +1%
MA: Bernie -12.4%, Biden +16.2%
SC: Bernie -6.6%, Biden +8.3%
VT: Bernie -11.0%, Biden +26.1%

"Errors" all favor Biden. This election (term used loosely) is running at 2x - 3x the UN-intervention level

This is inane. Take off the tin foil hat. Exit polls are not accurate and there's no UN rule that exit poll errors mean fraud. I'm going to block you for spreading misinformation.

Mankiw also makes the extremely important point that helping people be able to afford to stay home should help us be able to slow the coronavirus down.

- There are times to worry about the growing government debt. This is not one of them.
- Externalities abound. Helping people over their current economic difficulties may keep more people at home, reducing the spread of the virus. In other words, there are efficiency as well as equity arguments for social insurance.

I have an honest issue with the current response. If high risk is 60+, then shouldn't we separate older/sicker people? I walked into Whole Foods yest. Saw hundreds of older people there in crowded space because of this chaos. We're creating the high risk....

NYC Trader @SrEconomist · 1m

By separating everyone, we're strangling the economy. We shouldn't care if younger people get the virus. They're immune to it. We should care if they're hanging around older people. And we're literally pushing them into the chaos at grocery stores.

If you're operating truly through the lens of self-interest, then put it this way:

How will you look yourself in the mirror every day, knowing that in the period where you could have helped slow a pandemic and save lives, you instead got beers with Josh from college?

Also: there is no such thing as a "quarantine party" or a "social distancing hang."

If you are seeing people who are not your immediate family or the people you live with (roommates) then you are fucking this up.

Because not passing a bill would mean no additional people have paid leave. People can pontificate on here but it's not a moral victory to keep an issue going in a pandemic. People need help now. I've worked on paid leave for 9 years. This is nothing to scoff at.

You're not responding to @Taniel's point, your reply evaded it. The point is the Dem messaging shouldn't have been celebratory, but instead emphasized it's insufficient but urgency required taking what Rs would accept for now.

The numbers on how many large employers do not currently offer are unclear and in need of updating. We want people to take paid leave. So it's important to message that this is a significant step. We want takeup. Saying it's not enough may lower use.

One route of communication that is likely to work is GOP electeds > mayors and governors. Write/call your elected representative, ask for curtailment of mass gatherings. #FlattenTheCurve

These tweets are a misunderstanding of the health issues at stake. Young people will die from the virus because they sometimes don't even know of their underlying health issues. The death rate for young people is low. It's not zero.

It is also dramatically, pretty much entirely overthinks why young people are packing bars. No, it's not intergenerational praxis. They're just being idiots.

I know some Bernie people with this thinking, they dont care. They believe bernies claim that 45+ are the only ones backing biden. They see this as a chance to scare "us". I'm 34, into not voting and then Bernie can win

The decision to keep NYC schools open — to allow bars and restaurants to keep operating — is the most consequential of @NYCMayor tenure and will define his legacy. Lives are on the line. There is still time to do the right thing.

Bernies crowd is so similar to trumps. They are also anti fact and anti reality. He might be one of bernies people who thinks the virus helps Bernie by lowing older voters turnout. His appearances on tv make it seem like he believes that, hes a political hack

It is more that people are bad at changing behaviors or making sacrifices when they don't face the same consequences for bad behavior, eg, young people face the existential threat of climate change and the vulnerable and old among us face the more immediate threat of covid19

Your facts are wrong. Young people are at far less risk of death fm CoViD-19 than the elderly. And that's exactly where the danger lies: they're more likely to be asymptomatic carriers. W/o universal testing, there's no way to know if they're infected or not.

Donald, there's a strong sense that very young people and people in their teens, 20s, early 30s, are at a much lower risk level for the coronavirus. And I think that's been borne out. Correct me if I'm wrong. So do all the recommendations that we keep hearing apply us stringently to the young?

Yes, unless you're totally selfish.

What you mean?

Do you have a parent? Do you have a grandparent? Do you want to be the vector that carries that disease to them? Do you know anybody and love anybody who's older and might be frail? You don't want your last memory of that person — being that you gave them the virus that killed them. You'll kick yourself for the rest of your life if you did that. People who were hospitalized in China started at age 30 and went up to 70s and 80s. Yes, on average, the outcomes are better. But if you want something to worry about, you might be the person who doesn't have a good outcome. You're spreading a disease to your friends, your social circle. That's something you ought to feel guilty about. It's not something you ought to feel indifferent about. People have to take this seriously.

It is absolutely wrong that a young person risks little by getting infected. None of us should send out that message. Not even in a presumption of a tweet.

Thank you giving me a chance to clarify this. This tweet is about the cultural messages we are sending young people, and I believe this is one of them. But, as I say many times in the thread, NO ONE should be going out if they can avoid it.

This is what I was working off.

> Donald, there's a strong sense that very young people and people in their teens, 20s, early 30s, are at a much lower risk level for the coronavirus. And I think that's been borne out. Correct me if I'm wrong. So do all the recommendations that we keep hearing apply us stringently to the young?

Biden is from Pennsylvania originally and is not nearly stupid enough to ban fracking while he's fighting a narrow battle in the electoral college, and Bernie knows this, but he's going to push Biden to commit electoral suicide on this issue anyway.

Paris Climate Accord was no small feat. A historic global achievement.

For Bernie to laugh it off & say we need more without providing roadmap for how we get more only underscores the notion that Bernie talks a good game, but can't answer question of: how do you make it happen?

Don't judge the Fed by the markets. The market had a lot of reasons to go down. Playing the confidence game, especially now, is a fools game.

The Fed has a limited set of macro tools, it is using most of them, but it doesn't control the most important lever: FISCAL POLICY.

It's a shame that Trump's compulsive lying means we can't take that at face value.

At least they have a garage apartment, so they can avoid direct contact. What if you live in a one bedroom apartment and cannot self isolate?? Then what???

Briahna Joy Gray worked for Jill Stein's campaign in 2016.

It's not like she's a brilliant political strategist.

Ooh boy. Lots of lies today.

As long as they aren't about public health issues that could result on thousands of deaths, it's all good.

Think part of their strategy is then to use this as 45's justification to cut Social Security/Medicare.

It is NOT the best strategy to get money into Americans' hands either.

Do your job. We need universal emergency $1,000/month UBI NOW. There is no time to argue over means testing. Let means testing determine those who need more than $1,000 but make at least $1,000 universal for all adult citizens immediately.

If you think that, why didn't you ask Sanders to 1. Tell people not to vote today OR 2. Drop out of the race since it's basically impossible for him to be even the plurality winner?

And in the roller coaster that is US politics, at the end of last week Democrats were increasingly confident the election was going their way. After two strong days from the White House and the prospect of billions of stimulus dollars, that optimism is waning.

The CDC said there shouldn't be gatherings of more than 50+. The DNC went on with the vote anyway. A vote where many could not participate. Precincts were closed. Voting lines extended for hours. That is suppression.

Notice how you didn't deny the nationalism or demagoguery.

Though data on coronavirus testing has been spotty, what is available shows just how behind the United States is in its screening efforts. 1/

The first coronavirus cases in the U.S. and South Korea were discovered around the same time in January, but you can see that according to official government accounts, the U.S. tested far fewer patients in the weeks after. 2/

Primaries are definitely different from the general election, but driving turnout up in Michigan, Florida and Arizona is definitely a good sign for the general election. And Florida took place under very difficult circumstances.

And as much as I can't stand Trump, Biden will get wasted by Trump in the general election!

It's sad that the Democratic party would rather lose to Trump than nominate any person that will actually help the people. Unfortunately, helping the rich get richer is more important....

I still can't get over the fact that both the Army Corps of Engineers and FEMA essentially had to go on record in the NYT to plead for President Trump to give them orders so they can help.

The president is turning to racist rhetoric to distract from his failures to take the coronavirus seriously early on, make tests widely available, and adequately prepare the country for a period of crisis.

South Carolina, President Donald Trump likened the Democrats' criticism of his administration's response to the new coronavirus outbreak to their efforts to impeach him, saying "this is their new hoax." During the speech he also seemed to downplay the severity of the outbreak, comparing it to the common flu.

My PC has had tests—in their offices—for over a week. No restrictions other than "you have to have symptoms" (which is still somewhat problematic but they can't test everyone).
We need to find out why some areas have tests and some do not-or are saying they don't.
Good luck!

The Army Corps of Engineers, 37,000 people specifically trained to construct massive infrastructure projects, still hasn't been deployed while cities and states across the country openly fret about the number of available hospital beds.

President Trump is now claiming that he always took coronavirus seriously. In fact, he spent months dismissing it as less serious than the seasonal flu. During this time, he could have taken actions that would have saved lives. He chose not to.

It's horribly offensive. But Trump WANTS a debate over what the virus should be called NOT to be called to account for closing the pandemic office, minimizing the health & economic threat, losing weeks of preparation time and the scandal of far too little tests and equipment.

The U.S. and South Korea both confirmed their first cases of coronavirus on January 20.

As of yesterday, South Korea had tested 274,000 people. The U.S. had only tested 25,000.

Trump's failure to provide widespread COVID-19 testing is costing American lives.

Dem leadership is currently offering tax credits while people are literally unemployed and Republicans are offering temporary UBI and implementing a ban on evictions and foreclosures. Republicans are to the left of dem leadership right now. Its not debatable lol

It wasn't Pelosi's plan. It was Mnuchin telling Pelosi what tiny hands would accept - last week - when tiny hands was calling this a Democratic hoax and withholding tests so he could keep the numbers low while figuring out how to profit off making his own testing kits.

This is great news. I don't know exactly which hospitals are most in need, but my understanding is NYC and Seattle hospitals are in acute danger. If you're a hospital with a ventilator shortage or someone in a position to compile a list, please let @elonmusk and me know here.

The article gets into the trade offs, an interesting discussion. Definitely not trivial. It I think it also points to the complexities of the soft struggle over technology, brain drain and the future, how these things are not all zero sum.

I don't know the specific case here but double dipping and undeclared resources are illegal and rightly so. To some extent investigations and strengthening policies were absolutely warranted given the rampant skirting of regulations

I wonder that too. Like the way you rationalize and even promote a man who's never had a good record on women, race, or keeping healthcare safe, and social security expanded - Joe Biden. That's your guy. He will never be mine.

With so much economic activity at risk, a recession looms, and this one could rival or even exceed the #GreatRecession of 2008–2009.

The Great Recession was deep and its impact was harsh, but Americans who remained employed continued to spend money at fairly normal levels. 2/

Yesterday, President Trump said he was invoking the Defense Production Act, then turned around and said he wasn't planning to use it. The President should exercise these powers now. We need more ventilators, protective equipment, and critical supplies. We need action, not words.

You may want to mention that the reason there's a shortage in the first place is because the Chinese government confiscated all the factories from international corporations and cancelled all shipments to the U.S.

If only we had leadership, or even a team that specializes in responding to pandemics, that could have foreseen a mask shortage and done something about it before it became an emergency. You'd think the greatest country in the world would have that kind of leadership in place

He sounds even more stupid today than normal.

The lack of testing should be the only thing he's talking about. Well, that and accepting responsibility for this mess.

not necessarily. Wash state has comparable amount of testing and like a quarter of the cases. I think a lot of it is that it really is a lot worse in NYC/NYC than anywhere else.

Forget the rhetoric. Just the facts:

1. People still can't get tests.

When that changes, then, the response will be moving.

The phase-in is an incentive to work. The more you work, the more you get. Questionable in normal times, completely nonsensical now.

People need cash immediately to stabilize their lives. Allowing severe economic insecurity will only make the public health crisis worse.

If you assume that the number of actual infected persons in the US is 5x our current reported total, we are almost exactly where Germany is in terms of infections per capita.

Americans urgently need cash to meet immediate needs, that's been my goal from the start. The current bill has promise but it shouldn't give lower earners smaller checks —that's directly contrary to my proposal. We need to fix this to ensure lower earners get equal payments.

Everyone should get payments. Worry about taxation on high earners in 2020 later. People in the 2018 workforce may make significantly less now. The currently gop proposal is lopsided and irresponsible.

net programs. Direct payments, however, will not be nearly enough on their own to address this increasingly severe crisis, and must be supplemented with other critical areas of relief. Examples of this relief include dramatically expanded Unemployment Insurance, Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program benefits, emergency actions to stem evictions and address housing crises so people aren't on the streets or in crowded shelters, student debt relief to prevent resources intended to provide economic stimulus from being absorbed by unnecessary debt servicing, and financial aid to states, including their health programs, which are under immense strain.

Social insurance replaces lost wages (that's what is being insured against) and that's what an expanded UI and business backstops need to accomplish. Cash will do many thing, but it doesn't provide that insurance.

Note it's what actual social democratic countries are doing.

President Trump, asked about Americans with symptoms unable to get a test: “I’m not hearing it.”

Dr. Anthony Fauci, minutes later: “I understand with and empathize with people who say 'I want to get a test, and I cannot.'” He adds, “That is a reality that is happening now."

It's official: @SenAmyKlobuchar and I just introduced our bill to require #VoteByMail through November. Mitch McConnell should commit to including our proposal in the next #COVID19 package so states won't be forced to choose between holding elections and keeping people safe.

Under Mitch McConnell's direct payments plan, only 39% of people get the full amount. Thread

Len Burman @lenburman
Some key points: Only 39% of people would get the full rebate. Low-income people get no or partial rebate because 2018 income and tax liability are too low. High-income people excluded because of phaseout.

And 12% of households, including about 9 million at the bottom of the income scale, get nothing at all.

As we wrote earlier today that would include ppl who had no "qualifying income" in 2018, including those living on SSI & adult dependents of others.

Exactly right people. Whole states are not taking enough actions because they don't realize they are not testing enough to detect what may be a huge cluster. Looking at you Florida.

Burr cites a Trump/admin briefing supposedly showing officials warning the public. It actually shows them downplaying the threat!

In times of crisis, the American people deserve a president who tells them the truth and takes responsibility. Donald Trump has not been that president. For months, he falsely told us we had nothing to worry about while praising China's response for managing the coronavirus.

Now he's switched to falsely telling us that he's taking action that he has not taken, and promising results that he's not delivering. People are scared. They're frightened. And their president is just exacerbating their concerns.

Joe Biden (Text Join to 30330) @JoeBiden · 19m
The president has been behind the curve throughout this whole response. He's talking about yesterday rather than where we need to be tomorrow. The president needs to stop talking and start rallying government action with the urgency and ambition this moment demands.

I agree. This is why we did NOT do daily press briefings on Ebola. We focused on the response, and let the results speak for themselves. If the President and team spent more time getting tests, hospital beds, and PPE -- and less time talking about it -- we'd all be better off.

I learned from this interview that epidemiologists who figured this was coming a long time ago are very level-headed about this, partly because some of them have had like a decade to predict exactly how this is gonna play out.

This is the great betrayal.

Taken together, the reports and warnings painted an early picture of a virus that showed the characteristics of a globe-encircling pandemic that could require governments to take swift actions to contain it. But despite that constant flow of reporting, Trump continued publicly and privately to play down the threat the virus posed to Americans. Lawmakers, too, did not grapple with the virus in earnest until this month, as officials scrambled to keep citizens in their homes and hospitals braced for a surge in

The extent to which all these fucking guys re-write history when they were all soft-pedaling & presenting Trump as the superior option (but I'm explicitly not saying to vote for Trump WINK WINK)....is really something. The Intercept was practically the #1 Trump Pac of the Left.

It's hard to imagine a person less equipped to deal with this crisis than Trump. There are moments I find myself shaking with anger at people who voted for him. But I'm focusing on the virus now so we can all focus on ousting him in November.

Free question for anybody in the WH briefing right now:

What actions under DPA has the federal government actually taken?

Context: President has to (1) invoke the law to get the authority and then (2) use the authority.

Ask for examples of #2 and ask for specifics.

Joe Biden tells reporters on a call Trump is “behind the curve” and is “promising results he has not delivered and announcing actions that he has not even ordered.”

“He’s all over the map. In a crisis we need leadership that's straightforward, clear and reliable,” Biden says.

Pointing to the slow deployment of face masks, tests and a vaccine, Biden says Trump should “stop saying false things that will make you sound like a hero.”

“Stop swerving between over-promising, buck-passing, and start delivering protection to our people,” he says.

Biden lays out a 6-step plan for Trump:
1) Tests to all who need them
2) Invoke the Defense Production Act
3) Direct DOD to help with hospital bed capacity
4) Mobilize Medical Reserve Corps
5) $100 billion for mayors and govs
6) Daily reports on status of treatments and vaccines

This is good news. A dramatic and sharp increase in testing. We will see many more cases but that is in large measure because we are testing more. To reach South Korea's testing rate as a country, the US would need 1.3 million tests already. But this sharp increase is very good

Yes - although that is more about testing capacity increasing (data suggests actual cases double ~6 days). Given the rules of thumb above, and the lag from infection to hospitalization, we basically know where things stood 7-10 days ago (so perhaps the case # above are off by 2x)

Once new infections stop, it should still be weeks before shelter in place is lifted. Others will not show illness for two weeks after being infected, and if people start moving around too soon, new hot spots start and the whole damn exercise restarts. Gotta stamp it first time.

TRAFFIC ADVISORY

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Contact: P.I.O. (202) 727-4383

March 21, 2020

TRAFFIC ADVISORY: Street Closures

On Sunday, March 21, 2020, in coordination with the National Park Service, the Metropolitan Police Department will make several street closures beginning at 7:00 a.m. through approximately 8:00 p.m. at the following locations:

- The Memorial Bridge
- Lincoln Memorial Circle
- Potomac River Freeway (all exits to Ohio Drive and Independence Avenue)
- Rock Creek Parkway/Potomac Parkway Drive between Virginia Avenue and Independence Avenue, SW (to include Ohio Drive, SW)
- Independence Avenue between Ohio Drive and 14th Street, SW
- 23rd Street between Constitution Avenue and Lincoln Memorial Circle
- Henry Bacon Drive between Constitution Avenue and Lincoln Memorial Circle
- 17th Street between Constitution Avenue, NW and Independence Avenue, SW
- 15th Street between Constitution Avenue, NW and Independence Avenue, SW
- Maine Avenue between Independence and 12th Street, SW
- All vehicular exits to East Potomac Park and West Potomac Park

All street closures and listed times are subject to change based upon prevailing or unexpected conditions.

The public should expect parking restrictions along the street and should be guided by the posted emergency no parking signage. All vehicles that are parked in violation of the emergency no parking signs will be ticketed and towed.

Individuals and groups will encounter delays in the vicinity of this closure. To help flatten the curve, we strongly discourage any Tidal Basin visits because social distancing has not been possible due to visitor volume.

I don't think it ■ appropriate to silence opinions when we are making decisions like "shelter-in-place" and closing schools. People should be free to debate how policies are impacting their lives.

But this reflects the lag between when curve-bending measures (mostly meaning social distancing) go into effect and when they start to show up in the data. There's probably something like a 7-10 day lag between infection and when people go to hospitals.

For jurisdictions that still aren't doing enough social distancing, this may scare them straight (good). However, the governments who did shouldn't feel discouraged. In a 2-3 weeks' time, they'll likely see the benefits from it in the flow of new patients.

I don't think people yet realize that we will need to keep this social distancing going until there is a vaccine ready for mass production. It's not like we bed down for 3 to 8 weeks and the virus goes away.

This is important information. But it makes the case for national rules for stringent social distancing. The entire US should be under strong systems of social distancing but the Trump Administration has failed to do that.

I'm calling on the Federal Government to nationalize the medical supply chain.

The Federal Government should immediately use the Defense Production Act to order companies to make gowns, masks and gloves.

Currently, states are competing against other states for supplies.

Placido Domingo
2 hrs ·

I feel it is my moral duty to announce to you that I have tested positive for COVID19, the Corona virus. My Family and I are all in self isolation for as long as it is deemed medically necessary. Currently we are all in good health but I experienced fever and cough symptoms therefore deciding to get tested and the result came back positive. I beg everyone to be extremely careful, follow the basic guidelines by washing your hands frequently, keeping at least a 6 feet distance from others, doing everything you can to stop the virus from spreading and please above all stay home if you can ! Together we can fight this virus and stop the current worldwide crisis, so we can hopefully return to our normal daily lives very soon. Please follow your local government's guidelines and regulations for staying safe and protecting not just yourselves but our entire community.

Shame on any senator who voted for Leader McConnell's ploy to put the wish lists of big corporations ahead of the needs of workers and families at this time of national crisis.

McConnell's proposal was essentially a no-strings-attached bailout for corporations—with no oversight, no transparency, no protections against cronyism, no requirements for taxpayer returns, and no protections for the jobs, wages, or bargaining rights of workers who are at risk.

Leader McConnell's bill ignored the urgent needs of hospitals and did nothing to extend no-cost COVID-19 testing.

Why do people expect 15 days to be a magic answer? All it means is that you don't have the disease if no symptoms. It's not the end of the curve-flattening requirement period. No one knows how long that will take.

There is something I agree with @LindseyGrahamSC on. We need to get a handle on the virus with mass testing, virus surveillance systems, a strengthened health care system to take care of the sick. That's the way to get this under control and bring the economy back.

Jacob Wohl, who brought you all the greatest hits below, is circulating a fake, doctored coronavirus lab test with Joe Biden's name on it. It's disgusting under any circumstance -and unconscionable during a public health crisis- to spread misinformation.

Needless to say, for the tinfoil hat crowd — we spent the weekend building a TV studio in Joe Biden's basement. He doesn't have Coronavirus, but he does have a camera now. So buckle up!

Actually this is pretty bad news since it might suggest that warmer temperatures don't suppress the virus. Hopefully Coronavirus like the flu and SARS is seasonal sensitive.

It's unconscionable that Trump is still trying to kill the ACA. He needs to drop the lawsuit that will mean millions of people lose health care. And he needs to drop that lawsuit today.

It is interesting though. There is a gap between folks who want to help and the avenues to help (other than vote and stand in street and hold signs). Education on healthcare options is biggest hole in narrative. If people understood what this is they would vote accordingly.

She just texted me that her hospital is "starting to run out of masks & hand sanitizer."

Donald Trump's failure to invoke Defense Production Act threatens health care workers' lives.

What are you doing to fix this TODAY @GovAbbott?

The New York Times resolves the mystery. Trump has refused to invoke the act because big business doesn't want him to. "The U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the heads of major corporations have lobbied the administration against using the act," the Times reports.

I think it's constructive to have debates about how things re-open, in ways that keep transmission rates down while getting some things back to normal.

Question of when things re-open are hard, though, and premature until we start to see evidence that we've bent the curve.

FWIW, the uncertainty on the "when" question very much runs in both directions. Neither "in 15 days, we'll turn everything back on" or "prepare yourself: we're all going to be in lockdown for 5 months" are constructive positions in the debate.

What is more costly for the economy, a two week shutdown or a two month shutdown?

Unless you have an integrated macro-disease model you can't answer this question. In the two week shutdown the spread of diseased COULD end up resulting in even larger economic costs.

FWIW, the uncertainty on the "when" question very much runs in both directions. Neither "in 15 days, we'll turn everything back on" or "prepare yourself: we're all going to be in lockdown for 5 months" are constructive positions in the debate.

These very hard decisions are going to need support of a massive testing program. We need to test asymptomatic as well as symptomatic individuals. We also need a test to tell us if individuals have antibodies to the virus. Data

This, America, is absolutely irresponsible. You cannot be near other people while waiting for coronavirus test results. It endangers others & likely increases the spread of the virus.

THIS IS AN ARGUMENT FOR WHY WE NEED TO DO A LOT MORE SOCIAL DISTANCING!

COVID-19's death rate depends on how crowded our hospitals get. Ending social distancing too soon will push the death rate up. This is insanity.

Nobody is fiddling. We passed two bipartisan multi-billion dollar emergency bills in 2 weeks.

This is a $2T bill ($2 trillion!) and the draft that Republicans wrote doesn't fix the problem. Spending 18 extra hours to get $2T right is worth it.

This plan ■ crazy. Trump can't command a pandemic away. What's really going on? Americans will still get sick, miss work and even die. The stock market will still crash. They've lost suburb white women. Republicans have their eye on using emergency power to cancel 2020 election.

Yikes. Dr. Birx said only one more week of social distancing, looking at Trump as she said it. Clearly he ordered her to say it. This would be catastrophic.

At the end of the day, this is all about power. Trump and allied Republicans fear that he will be hampered in his reelection with a bad economy. And that, in turn, matters more than anything else: science, hospitals, social cohesion and, now, human life. It's all about power.

Since doing so comes at a human cost of a year's GDP, this sets the bar for any countervailing arguments about the advantages of "taking it on the chin."

We may pass the 50,000 mark in coronavirus cases, which is still likely underreported because we don't have tests, but Trump wants to limit social distancing to help his reelection. All the more damning because we are where we are because he didn't order tests early.

Anyway, I'm thinking about not just being decent and kind to young people, but also strategically: A message of "you will give up your futures so others can live" is not a winning one. "We will fight like hell so you can be repaid for this sacrifice" is a winning one.

No one is asking people to give up their future; the virus is very painful for young people. We are all asking people to take painful steps for a relatively short period of time -- and we're collectively taking steps to redress some of the economic shock- so few get the virus.

The choice isn't health v. the economy.

The choice is following the advice of scientists, doctors and experts v. listening to people who don't have a clue what they are talking about.

It will be REAL hard for Trump Republicans, who are now suggesting we risk 2.5% of the population - or 8+ million people - so we can prematurely reopen the economy, to make the pro-life case after this.

From a policy perspective, we are passing a massive stimulus in order to do that. Instead of giving people the sense that they are sacrificing others which they are not -- they are sacrificing for themselves -- we all are. You're a leader, share the truth.

1. Following a few Medium posts last week and Trump's remarks today, we have many pundits talking about how we need to be sure the cure isn't worse than the disease.
Basically, the tradeoff is between the economic harm from a protracted shutdown, and the lives lost without one.

Actually that was the point of my question -- were they advising them not to vote? Never answered -- they wanted to attack others, but not answer whether people should vote or not. I never told people to go to the polls, I asked what the posture of the campaign was.

I think some of those people are indeed being serious, and some aren't. But either way, it's probably time to get past the Overton-Window-framing stage and work on identifying some type of consensus plan that can be put into place soon.

Hi, Australia here!

An enormous chunk of our cases came from the US before we closed the border -- far more than from China (because we had already shut out Chinese visitors).

THREE flights from San Francisco to Sydney alone carried infected people here last Monday

The assumption that the 2 - 3.5% fatality rate will be for others and not them. Complete lack of empathy, some of us are fortunate enough to be able to isolate and might be able to continue doing so but those less fortunate won't. It's heartless, and cruel.

You're choosing to respond to someone who overstated it. You thought it was a good idea for voters to go to the polls when you should have known better. You disagreed with those who were advising them not to. You didn't make anyone vote and I don't think you should be in prison.

Actually that was the point of my question -- were they advising them not to vote? Never answered -- they wanted to attack others, but not answer whether people should vote or not. I never told people to go to the polls, I asked what the posture of the campaign was.

Other than Louisiana, which has really ramped up its testing, a lot of those states may be about a week behind the curve in New York in terms of both social distancing and testing/case-detection.

Cuomo is doing an excellent job. But this will hit more than 1% or 2%. Because anyone who needs a hospital when it's overrun by the virus will not be able to get help. Have a heart attack when there's no accessible health system and mortality goes up.

Good news: signs that perhaps density control is working. @NYGovCuomo says Tuesday hospitalizations slowed to doubling every 4.7 days from doubling every 2 days on Sunday. "This is everything" he says so hospitals can deal with the people coming in.

I know this is a complicated concept for you, but we have 6X the population of South Korea, so to have the same number of tests for Americans, we need 6 X South Korea's numbers. But because you were so late on testing now we need many more tests to see where the virus is.

> Donald J. Trump @realDonaldTrump
> Just reported that the United States has done far more "testing" than any other nation, by far! In fact, over an eight day span, the United States now does more testing than what South Korea (which has been a very successful tester) does over an eight week span. Great job!

Given where we are —on a trajectory of cases climbing faster than Italy—we need a national shelter-in-place order now. Every day we delay allows #COVID19 to spread further, hurt more people, and prolong the damage to the economy.

As Trump pitches the need for a $2.2 TRILLION stimulus package, he adds that he doesn't think the economy is in such bad shape as people say. “I don’t think it’s going to be such a rough patch," he says. Then why do we need hundreds of billions in bailouts for corporations?

If detected cases in each set of states continue to increase at their current rates, the number of cases in Trump states would surpass the number of cases in Clinton states on 4/11... the day before Easter.

@NateSilver538 · ١٠ س Nate Silver
There is also likely significant underdetection in Trump states. In Trump states that report on hospitalizations, 20% of detected cases are resulting in hospitalizations, compared to 12% in Clinton states (10% without NY). That probably means a lot of mild cases are being missed.

COVID PLASMA NEEDED

Patients recently recovered from COVID-19 have high levels of immunity in the form of antibodies in their blood that can be transfused into very sick COVID-19 patients in our hospitals. This treatment is known as "human convalescent plasma" and has been used in previous pandemics. We are ready to start treating patients later this week, but need your help.

If you have recently recovered from COVID-19, please volunteer to have your blood tested for high levels of antibodies. If so, we will work with you to see if you are both willing and qualified to donate plasma at a nearby blood donation center. You could save a life. If you can help, please email us at COVIDSerumTesting@mountsinai.org.

These might not seem like big differences. But multiplied over days/weeks, they matter a lot:

30% = daily growth is quite bad; steepest part of exponential curve
20% = slope nudged downward but still exponential growth
10% = rather encouraging, may mean Ro<1 and spread slowing

I live in MD & have been sick since 3/13, with all symptoms of COVID 19. A drive through testing site was opened near me and after consulting with the hotline was referred for testing. I was tested at 7am on 3/19. Just informed that results may take 10+ days.

And it also shows that the district is testing more per capita, if the DMV actually tested people, this wouldn't be such a "competition".

This 3.3 million jobless number is eye popping; I'm glad the Congress is passing large scale support for UI, support for families and small businesses.
Remember, we need to continue (increase in places) social distancing to beat the virus.

We need a national lockdown to stem the virus. We will all realize this eventually. And the virus will spread into places not locking down while we are figuring it out. The irony is Trump is making this virus last longer with the time he takes to resist this.

Reminder, we have very high unemployment numbers because we have to do radical social distancing. We have to do social distancing because we do not have enough tests to know where the virus is. We do not have enough tests because the Trump Admin bungled the tests.

Hi, my name is Gretchen Whitmer, and that governor is me

I've asked repeatedly and respectfully for help. We need it. No more political attacks, just PPEs, ventilators, N95 masks, test kits. You said you stand with Michigan — prove it.

According to Johns Hopkins, we are now at 85,000 cases and the idea of Trump talking down the virus, not giving ventilators to states, not buying ventilators, declining requests for help from governors who ask for it --it's rage inducing.

Rage is an appropriate response in the presence of evil.

Trump is a malignant narcissist, and he's behaving purposefully.

He wants people to die because the resulting economic chaos and emotional vulnerability will make our population pliable to his power consolidation efforts.

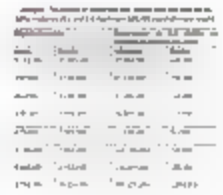
Correct. Prof Ferguson was asked in parliament about first wave deaths in scenario of v effective intervention. Gave numbers from same report as the original 500k. His response referred to Table 4 of imperial.ac.uk/media/imperial … released 10d ago



Jordan Ellenberg @JSEllenberg
And she said the Imperial group has scaled back its death estimates; that's just not right.

New paper on the 1918 influenza finds that cities that were most aggressive about banning public gatherings and other "non-pharmaceutical interventions" BOTH reduced deaths AND saw faster growth after the pandemic > are the economic costs and benefits of non-pharmaceutical interventions (NPI)? Using geographic variation in mortality during the 1918 Flu Pandemic in the U.S., we find that more exposed areas experience a sharp and persistent decline in economic activity. The estimates imply that the pandemic reduced manufacturing output by 18%. The downturn is driven by both supply and demand-side channels. Further, building on findings from the epidemiology literature establishing that NPIs decrease influenza mortality, we use variation in the timing and intensity of NPIs across U.S. cities to study their economic effects. We find that cities that intervened earlier and more aggressively do not perform worse and, if anything, grow faster after the pandemic is over. Our findings 60 people showed up for a choir practice earlier this month. 45 got sick. 1 has died.

A remarkable window into how contagious coronavirus can be, even when it appears nobody is symptomatic:

nytimes.com/live/2020/coro …

> Ruth Backlund, a co-president at the Skagit Valley Chorale, said the group was monitoring public health guidelines at the time of the practice and had asked people to stay home if they showed even minor signs of illness. The group gathered in rows facing a piano and a choir director. They were all in individual chairs and had space to keep separated. Ms. Backlund had made sure there were extra soap dispensers in the bathrooms for people to wash their hands.
